Did you know that William Penn was a Quaker from Cork? That and many more Unknown Facts about Quakers in Irish History

For our October 17th meeting of the IHRT, we have the pleasure of introducing not only a new speaker to our group but a new subject, never covered in any lecture series locally or nationally. Their numbers were never large but Quakers were successful business people who applied their beliefs onto leveling the ground for worthy causes such as abolition, famine relief, and peace keeping. They were a small, active, and influential group that has been a part of Irish history for 363 years. Join us for a stimulating talk at 7:30pm at the Knights of ST. Patrick hall, New Haven.

Jane Coppock is Clerk of the New Haven Friends (Quakers) Meeting House. She comes from a long line of Penn. Quakers since the 1680's. She was Asst. Dean at Yale, Forestry and Environment. She loves to take history courses in her retirement. She is thrilled to be able to speak to us.
