Maud Gonne as the Burmese Gong

Yeats wrote of his obsession with the beautiful political propagandist, Maud Gonne, “She resonated through my life like the sound of a Burmese gong, an overpowering tumult that yet had many pleasant secondary notes”. This woman who would dominate his life and inspired some of the most memorable poetry will be examined in our September 20th lecture by Louise FitzSimons of Hamden.

Louise is a writer and editor. She served as an International Affairs Officer for the U.S. Atomic Energy Commission in Washington and at the U.S. Embassy in Paris. She served in various posts in NYC and D.C., as well as in Europe. A graduate of Wellesley and Georgetown, she also studied at Yale and Sciences Po-Paris.
